FEATURE PICTURES HAVE BEEN BOOKED

By The Lyric Management, And Splendid Productions May Be Seen By Patrons.

The following feature pictures have been booked by the Lyric:

"Maud Muller," Wednesday, January 17; "Auld Lang Syne," January 24, and "Durbar," Wednesday, January 31; (this last is the most expensive picture that has ever been made up to this time); "Vanity Fair," Friday, February 2; "The Three Musketeers," February 6, and "Cinderella," February 26.

The patrons of the Lyric are being shown the very best that is on the market. The management is booking all the best pictures just as fast as they are issued and showing them on their curtain just as soon as any house in the country in towns of 15,000 population.

This feature picture "Durbar" has not been released yet and The Lyric will show it one week after it reaches this country and of course will have to pay a very high price for its use. They will have to pack their house at every performance to break even on it. The managers state that they want nothing but the best for their patrons and will show no picture in their house that has not passed the Censorship. They will be glad at any time to receive suggestions whereby they can improve their service.

WINCHESTER IDEA—HUSTLE

JUDGE LINDSEY IN WINCHESTER

(By W. S. Anderson)

Mr. John G. Shedd, President of Marshall Field Company, Chicago, Ill., says: "What the country is suffering from now, is too much politics and too little statesmanship. Politics is always a destructive force, because the one theme with which a demagogue can be sure of catching the ear of the multitude is the rottenness of things as they are and the need of a change. Statesmanship is constructive, because its object is to open a road out of any slough into which the nation may have fallen, and to build bridges over the crevices and cut tunnels through the obstructions which lie in the way to safety."

I have always had a very great contempt for the man who criticizes and does nothing more. Destructive criticism gives no evidence of ability; constructive criticism is an indication of brains and often of genius. Judge Lindsey is a constructive critic. No man can use harsher words than he of some things relating to juvenile crime, but he says such things only to show the change that is taking place, and must take place. It is not flattery to call him a constructive statesman. However many other Americans now living to whom this phrase may rightly be applied there is no doubt that Judge Lindsey leads the list of them all. His work is so unique, his reform so fundamental, that his name must be placed among the distinguished men of our nation.

Judge Benton, in appropriate sentences, on Saturday evening introduced Judge Lindsey to a good sized audience. The excessively cold weather made it impossible to have the Opera House comfortable, but even so the Judge received warm attention for over two hours. It is a source of regret that the severity of the weather prevented so many from attending the lecture and made those who did attend uncomfortable. The college and Winchester were fortunate to have secured for an evening, a man who is in such great demand in larger places.

In the main, the theme of Judge Lindsey was the work which his juvenile court had done and the results therefrom, and the results that he hopes and expects yet to follow not only in Denver, but wherever there are boys. The Judge is a young man in appearance, but old in achievement and in knowledge of human nature. He is not an orator of the Bryan type, his voice is rather weak and lacks something of carrying power. In his frail body there is a glowing, great-big heart. There is passionate devotion for the unfortunate boy. There is love for men, and a hatred for the sins which men and boys commit. But the greatest hatred of all for the industrial condition responsible for placing children where they are exposed to the hardship and temptation of unholy surroundings.

The task which Judge Lindsey has set himself is a simple, though not an easy one. He is only asking for laws that will recognize the value of the individual as well as the value of property. He is asking that the resources of penal institutions be used to save or reform instead of punishing them only. Of course, he is wise enough to admit that some cannot reform or be reformed, these must be kept under restraint, yet so optimistic is he, or should I say so wise is he, that he believes that under the right influence and environment a vast majority can and do reform. Over and over did he declare that the jail fails to correct, the penitentiary does not reform. The dread of jail, penitentiary or punishment does not deter. Instead of fear must be instilled a love for truth and right.

This can be done for the boy of the present, the citizen of the future, only by an united effort of home, church and state.

The abounding energy of the boy must have wise direction or it will lead the boy to violate the regulations of society. The Judge believes these outbursts of petty transgressions call for wise counsel and sympathetic training. He reforms by commending, he restrains by trusting. It is his love, his fair dealing, his interest, his sympathy that has made him the "Kids' Judge." Words cannot declare his love for the boy. For the boy he has been maligned by every force of evil that stalks supreme in a big city. For the boy he has fought the political boss, the financial magnate, the grasping corporation. For the boy he lives, for the boy he has suffered, as for the rights of the boy I believe he is willing to die. The history of our times will not properly be recorded unless Judge Lindsey be enrolled as a great constructive statesman. It was a great privilege, and a great pleasure to hear him. Surely Winchester will be better for his coming.

TO SELL CARDS OF MEMBERSHIP

Associated Charities Are Doing A Wonderful Work, And Every Assistance Should Be Given.

The Finance Committee of the Associated Charities will this week make their canvass of the merchants and other business houses of the city to sell the annual Associated Charity Membership Card for 1912.

These Cards sell for $5 each and all holding one becomes a member of the organization. Every merchant and business house in the city should have one of these cards, and should keep it on display in a prominent place throughout the year, as it will be the means of saving far more than the price paid for membership.

A fraud beggar seeing this card will invariably pass by the house, for they know that they will be sent to the Charities if they appeal for help, and the fraud knows that the Charities will investigate his case thoroughly, and an investigation is the last thing he wants. The worthy poor will readily go to the Charities, when sent, and will be helped if their case requires it.

Every appeal should be sent to the Charities for investigation, and holding one of these membership cards no person or firm should hesitate to refuse to give to any beggar applying but should send the applicant to the Charities, as that organization becomes your agent for investigation and contribution.

It is hoped that all who purchase membership cards will put them in the windows or other prominent places that they may be seen by the public. The Committee hope to sell at least 100 cards this week.

Let everybody assist in this good work.
